About Korea Institute for International Economic Policy

The Korea Institute for International Economic Policy (KIEP), established in 1989, is a government-funded economic research institute addressing the international economy and its relationship with Korea. KIEP has aimed to be a regional hub for international economic policy research, and has served as a warehouse of information on Korea's international economic policies for 30 years.

As a government-funded research institute, we have accomplished critical research and in-depth analysis on international economic policy issues, in areas such as international macroeconomics, finance, trade and commerce, international investment, international financial cooperation, and regional studies for a variety of governmental agencies and research partners.

KIEP has an affiliate in Beijing, and also works in partnership with the Korea Economic Institute of America (KEI) located in Washington D.C. KIEP also operates National Center for APEC Studies from our institute.

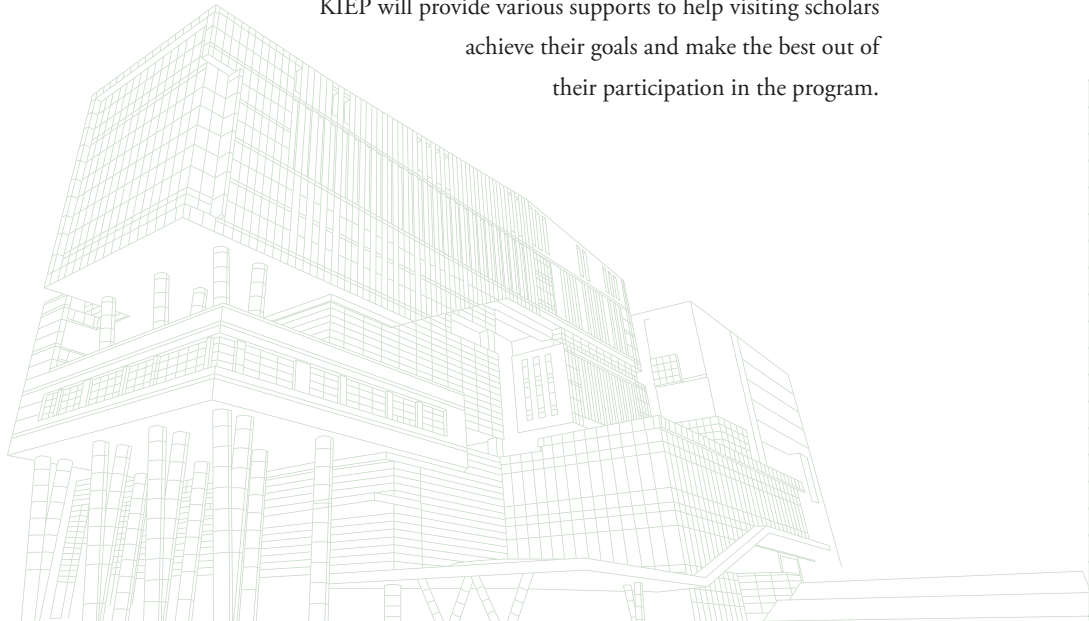

KIEP continually strives to provide effective research reports on various international economic issues, and expanding cooperation has been an important part of these efforts. In addition to many joint projects, KIEP has formed many close partnerships with the world's leading research institutes and has established a broad network with over 80 overseas institutions.

KIEP boasts a highly knowledgeable economic research staff. Now numbering over 200 members, our staff includes over 60 research fellows with PhDs in economics and related fields.

About the Program

KIEP invites prominent researchers and academics to join its Visiting Scholars Program. In 2009, the program was launched with a view to advancing cross-border exchanges of knowledge, information, insight, and expertise among scholars with different backgrounds. The duration of the program is one month and visiting scholars will reside and work in Sejong. Visiting scholars are expected to actively engage in networking and research activities during their visit to KIEP.

KIEP will provide various supports to help visiting scholars achieve their goals and make the best out of their participation in the program.

Eligibility Criteria

They should hold either a doctoral or a master's degree with at least 7 years of relevant professional experiences after obtaining the degree.

Korean citizens and Korean nationals with permanent residence status in foreign countries are not eligible to apply.

Foreign scholars in the field of international economics, emerging economies, economic policies and the like are welcome to apply.

Working knowledge of English is required.

 - round-trip airfare for economy class and visa application fees(to be reimbursed after arriving in Korea)
 - accommodation in Sejong
 - insurance
 - stipend for the cost-of-living in Sejong and research activities at KIEP
 - The stipend will be approximately KRW 2,800,000 for a month of program duration
 - The amount will vary depending on the exact duration of each scholar's visit to KIEP and be determined in accordance with rules of the institute.
 - The stipend will be provided in two installments, at the beginning and end of the program
 - a KIEP Mentor will be available for consultation in regard to writing the paper and networking in KIEP.

Application & Selection

KIEP accepts applications year-round and selections will be made on a half-yearly basis in the early June and December of the year.

The application should include Application Form, Curriculum Vitae, Letter of Recommendation, and One Publication that represents the best research/academic performance of the applicant.

Please submit your application to outreach@kiep.go.kr by the end of May or November to be considered for a committee review.

Applicants will be notified whether their application has been successful in due course following a committee review.
